Thanksgiving.

This is a day set apart as a tribute to Divine goodness. President and governors so declare in their proclamations, and churches are opened throughout the land for appropriate services. It is our great annual day of family reunions. The young folks come back to the old homestead and hear renewed the parental blessing. The merry-makings are hearty and universal. The war upon Turkey is relentless, and the feast is a thing to be remembered, as its repetition is to be looked pleasantly forward to through all the following year. The weather this year suits the occasion. We shall all rejoice if the night shall have brought us snow enough to start the merry jingling of the sleigh-bells. No, not all. Only those will rejoice who have warm homes and are comfortably clad. Those who are poor and destitute feel all the more bitterly their situation on days like this, and should be made happy by the thoughtfulness of the well-to-do,
